HOW DID WE DO IT?

When we got here, the only fleece available to screenprinters was 2-end knitting...and it wasn't good enough. So, we started manufacturing fleece with a finer 3-end knit, which makes the garment surface easier to print.

The 3-end process can be more expensive partly due

Social responsibility

At The Khane, we are dedicated to continuously improving our practices to create products that uphold higher social and environmental standards while minimizing our overall impact. We have an obligation to future generations and are committed to doing our part by creating a product that is more responsible to the planet.

We have stricter than industry standard quality checks in place, and all of our manufacturing occurs in vertically integrated, ethically responsible, and socially compliant factories. We prioritize maintaining responsible workplace and environmental standards, partnering only with those who share our values of humane and safe working conditions. All our factories are WRAP certified.

Over the past few years, we've made significant strides and will continue to seek improvements. We have reduced excess waste, minimized water usage, and shifted most of our manufacturing to renewable energy sources. Additionally, we are committed to finding more sustainable and ethical alternatives for key materials. We also support the Better Cotton Initiative, the largest cotton sustainability program in the world.

Sustainability

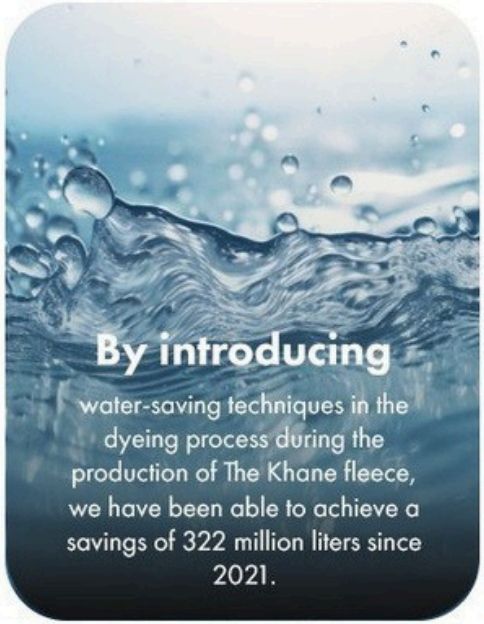

We are committed to continuing to design sustainable products with more environmentally-friendly fibers and processes.

Since 2021, we've recycled 110 MILLION plastic bottles in the knitting of our fleece.

Since 2021, we've recycled 110 MILLION plastic bottles in the knitting of our fleece.

By introducing water-saving techniques in the dyeing process during the production of The Khane fleece, we have been able to achieve a savings of 322 million liters since 2021.
